HONOR TO HENRY.

Henry Schwaib is again the man who planned and brought to a successful conclusion the masquerade ball at the Court-house New Year's eve. Henry knows how to do things that way and when he undertakes to finance a ball through success invariably attends him.

SOME WEATHER IMPROVEMENT.

The Weather Clerk got ashamed of the miserable mud and slush with which his labors had covered the earth for so long and on Monday for a while covered it up with snow, which later only added to the evil, so on Tuesday morning he put on a nice carpet of the "beautiful," which met the requirements admirably and made folks grateful.

PUBLIC SALE.

I will sell, at my residence, about 3 miles from Owensville, on the W. H. Rice farm, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, Jan. 17, 1903, the following: buggy and harness, 1 new wagon, McCormick Machine and Rake, (used two years), all kinds of farming implements. Household and kitchen furniture. Terms made known on day of sale.

Wm. Roberts.

TAX SUPERVISORS.

The Bath County Board of Tax Supervisors began their session Monday. They will continue the work all this week and then adjourn a week to give the Sheriff time to summon taxpayers whose assessments have been changed. The Supervisors are: Allen Evans, Sharpsburg; Jacob Bord, Bethel; James Power, Wyoming; S. D. Thompson, Owensville; Harrison Coyle, White Sulphur.

Geo. Spencer's Death.

George Spencer, son of John Spencer, of Peak's Mill, Franklin Co., died of consumption Monday morning at his home near Olympia. Consumption was the fatal ailment. The body was taken to Franklin county Tuesday for burial. Deceased was aged 28 years. His wife, whom he married in Franklin Co., and two children, aged two and eight years respectively, survive. We were not acquainted with the deceased nor with his family, but his father is a Bath county man and a clever bow fellow. To him and his wife, as well as to the widow and children, The Outlook tenders its sympathy in their distress.

ADDELIGHTFUL EUCHE.

The progressive euchre party given by Ewing Conner on the eve of Dec. 30th was one of the most delightful entertainments of the season. Between fifty and sixty guests were present to enjoy the lavish hospitality of the host. Twenty couples occupied the euchre tables, and the evening was a most successful one.

THE COUNTY'S POOR HOUSE FARM.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

The elite of Owensville, especially and particularly those of the chosen who practice the terpsichorean art under the auspices of the Owensville Dancing Club, for the second consecutive New Year's eve, assembled at the Court-house Wednesday night of last week—not to "muse the past with sorrow," but the rather to rejoice with Old Father Time as he sent "another year to blend with the mysterious tides of Old Eternity." For why should vivacious innocence, youth and beauty and buoyant young manhood and chivalrous spirit have any past to muse upon with sorrow? Sad memories are not for them; bright anticipations, radiant hopes, are their portion, and he is a masquerader who would deny to them their dues. Though the old year may have "borne along upon its heaving breast a thousand wrecks of glory and of beauty" it is not for them to "mourn that such is destiny." And there is no more expressive way of manifesting the joy of living than in the graceful dance to the strains of inspiring music. Therefore, on with the masquerade. Lot joy be unconfined and bright lights shine over the revelry of fair women and brave men as they vindicate their youth and enjoy the heritage that is theirs while it lasts!

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

The spectators began to gather about eight o'clock in the ball-room, which presented an inviting appearance with its light and white canvassed and waxed floor. Soon in couples and groups came the masqueraders. The ladies with very few exceptions wore the same style of costumes—white dominoes. And they looked ghostly enough. None but their intimates could make even a reasonable guess as to their identity.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

The gentleman masqueraders mostly wore fantastic costumes; some wore ladies' dominoes. Wm. F. Mark selected a false face that was an exact counterpart of his features except for its exaggerated and unnatural color, without any other disguise. Clark Patterson portrayed the agile Spanish matador and looked like he could dispatch a wild, fierce bull with Castilian grace while receiving the plaudits of the fairer sex.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

George Dawson represented a "Canvassing Candidate," with shield and sword and an elaborate costume that defies ready description. He could have had all the make-up for the asking. Eugene Brother was a Franciscan or "black" monk all right, but he was eligible to the captaincy of the Louisville team too without an effort.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

Jack Owens went as a "Curious Old White Man" and he looked the part to perfection. Joshua Owens, Holman Rice and James Ross were only comic false faces.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

Morris Brown and Wallace Gudgeon were dandy cowboys from the Wild and Woolly West. If there were any other male masqueraders they were not identified, as all quickly unmasked, owing to the warmth engendered by thick coverings for the face.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

Not a few sets were danced before all masks were discarded. Dancing continued until about 12 o'clock, when there was an intermission for lunch. About one o'clock dancing was resumed and kept up until about 5 o'clock.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

The ball was an all-around success and adds another to the long list of the Owensville Dancing Club. The utmost decorum prevailed, which has come to be a matter of course at the public gatherings of society in this town.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

The dancers present were: Misses: Mary McQueen, Louisville; Annie Winn Williams, Frankfort; Ida Waide, Nicholasville; Mary Miller Coleman and Corinne Kirkpatrick, Mt. Sterling; Ella Ratliff, Sharpsburg; Nell McCoy and Juliet Wood, Lexington; Lucile Alexander, Olympia; Sallie Faris, Mary Gudgeon, Mary Conner, Ellen Botts, Lorena Perry, May Kincaid, Lillian Daugherty, Anna Peters, Clara Bascom, Louise Gudgeon, Julia Elliott, Lottie Atchison.
